Jurors:

Kevin Taylor

Kevin Taylor is a self-taught photographer who operated a successful professional wedding photography business for 25 years in the Toledo, Ohio area. Kevin began as a youngster photographing nature, his family vacations, and his friends' automobiles. Later on, he took courses in Chicago to learn posing and lighting, and also received guidance from a family friend who was a photographer/hobbyist. After dissecting every aspect of a typical wedding day, he jumped in and became one of the top wedding photographers in Northwest Ohio throughout the 80s and 90s. Those were the days of film and manual focus/exposure cameras; these days he approaches nature with his digital, auto-everything equipment and has started all over again.

Charles Zelms

Charles Zelms has been making photographs since 1973 when his parents gave him his first 35mm camera. While he considers himself to be a "nature photographer," Chuck dabbles in architecture and people now and then, which fits in nicely with his passion for travel and outdoor activities. He says he's always looking for that special light and interesting patterns. His most recent trip to Norway found Chuck overwhelmed with hours of "golden hour light" because for five days the sun never set. Since retiring from an engineering career some years ago, his passion for photography has grown even more. Chuck has served as president of the Worthington Area Art League (artinview.com) and The Focus Group (focuscolumbus.com) both in central Ohio and actively participates in their exhibits and other activities. He has judged exhibits for Columbus and Franklin County Metro Parks as well as local camera clubs. You can learn more about his photography and travels on his website (charleszelmsphotography.com).
